THE PRESS ON THE ACTION OF THE LORDS-IM-MENSE ORANGE DEMONSTRATION IN IRRLAND. London, Jude 19 .- The Times to-day in its article on the passage of the Irish Church bill to its second reading says that the bit has passed by a large majority, and a peaceable termination of the session is now assured. The great triumph is not so much a triumph for the ministers as it is for the power of public opinion and the machinery of the constitution. Looking back into the history of this question-it is impossible not to be impressed with the fact that England is, above all things, well governed. The scandal will now be removed that arose in a mistaken policy, upheld by the whole people and endured through the languor of public opinion. But the mind and conscience of the people were at length aroused, and the fabric crease the people's estimation of the House of Peers. Their judgment furnishes additional proof of the utility of the Upper House. The second reading is but a preliminary to moulding the bill into a form better to satisfy

I have thought a great many times I would like to ask the sisters a question upon another subject entirely—that subject they are always thinking about—namely; plurality of wives. I have thought a thousand times I would ask the fe-nale portion of our community whether, if it were left to their opinion, they would retain the practice of this principle in our midst, or whether they would have it obliterated. I want to tell them a little about it—namely, it is a principle that always has existed and that always will.

LOOK AT NEW YORK. LOOK AT NEW FORE.

LEOR AT NEW FORK.

An argument used by men and women against plurality of wives is, that there are about as many men as there are women. Suppose that to he so. Acknowledge that proposition to be true, and say that there are no more women than men, and that every man should have a wife. What of it? Men will not be righteous, and women are left to desolation and destruction.—Read the statistics of such matters in our Eastern cities. In New York, for instance, from eleven to fourteen thousand young women, from sixteen to twenty-one years of age, perish annually in the gutters, on the sidewalks, on door-steps, or in the hovels around. This is no worse than it is in other places where proatitation prevaits. Many would like to prostitute the women of Utah, but I pray they may never be able to do it. So far as the mere number of wives is concerned, I do not care whether I have one, a dezen, or forty. lozen, or forty.

A great many ask me how many wives I have, but to tell the honest truth I never thought enough about it to stop and think. But I will get up the facts of the case and tell thought enough about it to stop and think. But I will get up the facts of the case and tell everybody so that they may stop asking me these questions. I suppose I have a dozen or fitteen that I am taking care of; perhaps a few more, I do not know, and I care nothing about it. I try to do good, and try to save the people and I say do not let a lady come to destruction. It is grievous to me to think that, right in this city, there should be any necessity for ladies to marry wicked men, which they would not do if the "Mormon" elders would do their duty. It looks as though our young men are indolent and slothini and do not understand the principles of life. As an excuse, however, they will say, "My dear friend and Brother Brigham, I cannot get married; why, if I get me a wife she wants a carriage to ride in, a birel girl to wait upon her, and a piano in the parlor to thomp upon when she pleases, and f cannot sustain it." I am sorry to say there is too much truth in this. Now, you young women, tell the young men you will work and help them to live; tell them so that they may marry you.

A VOICE FROM AFRICA.

nial regattas in the beautiful bay of Charleston harbor, the quiet waters of the Savannah, and the annual races over the courses of both the above cities? Men and women, old now in age and history, look back to the joyous scenes, the "Regatt Hops," the "Jockey Club Ball," and the etceteras of fushion life and vivacity, and grow young again in their contemplation. Eight years of telling history have rolled around, and with them, in a large measure, the depressing influences incident Bouth. thereto.

The gentlemen of the South are still alive to the benefits of such social organizations, tending to promote health, mental activity, and agreeable intercourse.

On Friday, June 18th a number of gentleinved now in this home of the African nearly twenty years; but I have not forgotten the old senes in Virginia, nor the kindness of many white friends in former days. I wish it was in my power to return for a time, that my voice might be heard by my colored brethren of the Southern States.

own blood in the South, now left to their own resources. I see a tide of white men pouring over those fields which have heretofore fed them; a tide coming from the overflowing population of the Northern States and Europe. I remember how that tide, when slow and feeble, swept off the native Indians; and now, as it rushes in its might, what is to shield the transplanted African from its waves? I can think of but one hope for him.

If, as a body, the colored people of the South shall identity themselves with the white people who now occupy and hold the soil, gein their affection and confidence, and become useful members of their communities, they may float above the torrent and still dwoll in peace among the a sociations of the past; otherwise they must, in the lapse of years, be curied beneath it, or washed, like drift-wood, into the burning zone ground the Equator. And yet the occasional letters and papers we receive here from the United States tell us that political demagogues from the North, pedding politics for their own profit, are exciting our race to hostility towards the whites. If they shall become the dupes of such emissaries their fate is sealed. The scattered white men on this continent of Africa might as well array themselves against the native tribes of black men, with the, expectation of meeting anything but destruction in the pursuit of such folly. I feet some confidence that the more intelligent portion of the people of color will not be led astray by adventurers who will use them while they reap any personal profit from pretanded friendship, and desert them when they please. But the mass have not had time to learn lessons of political wisdom, and the prospect fills me with sadness. If I cyclic but-make them hear me, I would appeal to them to make them hear me, I would appeal to them to make them hear me, I would appeal to them the make them hear me, I would appeal to them through their lives for their high character and honesty and intelligence, to seek the welfare of the people on whem they must depend through all time for their own presperity, to do no set waich shall give to the white people for the deal, othern the mean as have been known to them through their twentheir own presperity, to do no set waich shall give to the white people for the people on whem they must depend through all time for their own presperity, to do no set waich shall give to the white people for consumities in which

Prince Frederick, the heir apparent to the frown of Denmark, is to marry the Princess Louisa, the only child of the King of Sweden, and heiress presumptive o his crown! The Prince is twenty-six years of age and the Princess nearly eighteen. Upon the death of the reigning monarchs of the two kingdoms, the crowns will probably be united. But as the King of Denmark is only fifty one, and the King of Sweden only forty-three, it may be a good many years before this consummation can be reached.

-A curious exhibition in London is a company of trained acrobatic fleas. They draw little vehicles and turn wheels, but they seem to do it under a uniform feeling of disturbance and apprehension, which is sufficient to occasion the motions which produce the desired effect. The needed irritation is produced by a certain motion of the hand of the proprietor of the fleas. They are accustomed to feed of his hands-that is, to suck his blood every morning, but they do not seem to be greatly imbued with confidence in bim, and when he puts his hand near them they go into ecstacies of fright, which suffice to produce the effects which the public admire. The fleas take a very short time to train, and they live nine months. Every night they are put to sleep in wool, unless one of them requires punishment, in which case he is tied to a post, and has to walk round it like a mill-horse. This tving is one of the greatest wonders of the exhibition. The fleas are all tied for the purposes of their work round the thin part of their bodies. They are tied with fine hairs or lengths of spun glass. They do not jump except when troublesome. Probably, like many humans, they have had all the jump taken out of them by the

The official candidates received in Paris 66,117 votes; the opposition candidates, 229,758 votes. In 1852 the official candidates received in Paris 132,006 votes; in 1857, 111,018 votes; in 1869 83.590 votes. The candidates of the opposition received in Paris in 1852, 83,101 votes; in 1857, 101,207 votes; in 1863, 149,406 votes. In 1868, no less than 5,800,000 votes were cast for official candidates throughout France, and only 1 800,000 votes were given for opposition candidates; in 1869 4 000,000 votes were given for official caudi dates and 8,200 000 were given opposition candidates. The government majority which in 1863 was half a million votes more than the whole number of votes cast in its favor in 1869, being 3.590,000, has fallen to only 800,000 votes; in other words, 2,300,000 voters who were supporters have become opponents of the government. The rejection of M. Emile Olivier is indicative of the absence of political intelligence on the part of these people. He would accept liberty from the empire; if the Emperor would transform existing institutions into a government like that England possesses, he would be satisfied. His constituents call him a traitor for acting upon these opinions, and di card him for M. power, in its last issue, uses the following language:

It seems not at all likely that we shall witness something of the same kind during the coming fall. It is easting no extraordinary discredit on the Republican party to say that ever since 1895 it has been losing its hold on the popular affection. It had a very difficult work to do in reconstruction, and one for which the experience of the war had hardly fitted its leaders, and which, from its very nature, was sure to damage the reputation of any party which undertook it. It was enabled to carry it out successfully solely owing to Andrew Johnson's folly and the South's obstinacy and stupidity. How deeply the leaders felt the importance of Johnson's folly to the party was well shown by the frantic efforts made by them and by the barty papers to magnify his "crimes" and the barty papers to magnify his "crimes" and the gravity of the impeachment trial. In addition to this, the party has had the spending it reight years of enormous sums of money, and has been forced to collect and disburse it without any adequate administrative machinery. The consequence, and the investigable consequence, has been not only that the party has has had to shoulder the responsibility of great abuses, but has had to witness the accession to its ranks of a prodigious number of knaves and adventurers, and to bear the barden of their "loyalty" and "soundness" while entirely unable to put a stop to their plundering and peculating. Some allowance, ioo, in investigating the cause of the decline of the party in popular estimation, must, of course, be made for the weariness of any party which has been long in power which inevitably comes over the public before many years. Many people forget the misdeeds of the opposition, are constantly freted by the faults of the administration, and gradually worked them selves first into a belief that any change would be for the better, and then into a determination to have a change of seme kind at any cost.

The party was, therefore, in a somowhat sorry cost.

The party was, therefore, in a somewhat sorry plight at the approach of the Presidential election; and if it had made up its mind to discard Grant, and Democrats had made up their minds to take Chase, there is, we believe, little doubt in the minds of arcful observers that ir would have gone to pieces. Here the little doubt in the minds of arcful observers that it vould have gone to pieces. Here the tolly of the opposition, combined with the energetic action of the sensible men at the Chicago Convention, postponed the evil day. As it was, Grant may be said to bave achieved a respectable victory only by the poculiarrities of the elective machinery. Had he been dependent on a direct popular vote, he would have barely escaped defeat. The history of his administration thus far has certainly not been of a character to give the party a new hold on the popular confidence. Indeed, he warmest friends have been forced almost from the first to act on the detensive—to devote themselves, in fact, mainly to the work of proving, not that it has established new claims to popular gratitude, but that it has done nothing to earn popular distrust.

It is not at all surprising, therefore, that the hack politicians, whose presence in its ranks and use of its machinery as their ownends have brought so much discredit on it, ends have trought so much discredit on it, should once more begin to feel anxions, and cast about for some means of rekindling the popular enthus arm in its behalf, or procuring a renewal of its lease of power.

The closing performance of the National Peace Jubilee was given to-day by from 7000 to 9000 school children, attracting a large and delighted audience. Ole Bull performed a solo, Parepa Rosa and Adelaide Phillips sang a duet, and other pieces were given, all of which were encored. The closing piece, "The One Hundreth Psalm," was sung by the children, the audience joining. Several children, overcome by the heat and excitement, fainted during the concert, but they received immediate attention and sustained no serious injury.

The members of the orchestra presented Mr. Gilmore with a gold watch and chain.
